The Louisville Courier says of the report just made by the inspectors in reference to the recent explosion of the steamer Cumberland, by which 17 or 18 lives were lost: "The report shows that there was no lack of water in the boilers; that the engineers on duty were solver, careful, competent men; that the cause of explosion was a defective sheet in the boiler, which at one or more points had been worn away by corrusion to less than one-sixteenth of an inch in thickness, and expresses grave doubts as to whether her boilers had been subjected to the tests required by law, and that the boilers were known to be faulty in construction. It is proven that the rolling is charged.
